imerican Review, styles the chesp odging houses of the cities "nurseries of orime," and regards these houses as one of the most troublesome factors of the social problem. These houses are not merely the temporary haven of unfortunate wretches who cannot afford more respectable chelter, and take bed there while seeking for honest employment, but they are the rendezvous and swarming points of the vil-est and most vicious of the petty oriminal classes, sneak thieves, footpads and thugs, the more dangerous because the most depraved of law-breakers. The houses are unmistak-ably recruiting grounds for all manner of crime, and places for the propagation of the lowest vices. Luckless or unfortunate young men who go to the cities to seek employment, drift to these places when their money is exhaused, and are quickly amiliarized with crime, and it is doubtful if one out of ten who become lodgers in these houses ever afterward leads a reputable life. The corruption of the moral nature is the inevitable result to the young of coming in contact with the low and vicious. The temptation of orime is an escape from the hardships of distressing circumstances and inability to get honest employment, and is yielded to without great resistance, and the ranks of the criminal classes are steadily re-One of the inherent characteristics of man is greed, and no labor is too arduous or dangerous to deter him from searching for wealth. The latest illustration of this axiomatic statement comes from Coyoacan, a suburb of the City of Mexico, where extensive excavations are being made by private associations to recover treasures of gold and jewels supposed to have been hidden there by Emperor Montezuma at the time of the Spanish conquest. The search is led by a lineal descendant of the last Aztec emperor. Cuantemac, who has in his possession hieroglyphic documents showing that it was in this region that Montezuma hid his vast treasures, and among other things, an immense amount of gold. Already vast quantities of jewels have been found besides the remains of hundreds of Indians, proving beyond question that Indians there buried were pure Aztecs. The value of the buried treasure is estimated at $60,000,000, but the intrinsic value of the things buried by Montezuma is surpassed by their historical importance. Bolshay's Career of Crime.

Reimund Holshay, the murderer and robber, has been transferred to the new jail at Beasemer. It was proposed to take him over into Wisconsin for trial, but this the Gogebic county authorities strongly resist. Keimund Holshay, the bandit, is not a novice in the performance of villainous crimes. When the Milwaukes & Northern train robbery was first reported the officials of all the railroad lines in Wisconsin and Michigan were furnished with a description of the robber. Supt. Donohue of the Milwaukes & Lake Shore railway, as soon as he had read the description, add: "I believe that I know that man." Mr. Donohue remembered his name as "Haizhauer," instead of Holshay. About five years ago the Lake Shore company purchased of the St. Paul Eastern Grand Trunk company the roadbed of the line running to Oconto. The former company had not paid off its men for a good while, and in purchasing the road the Lake Shore assumed numerous sums due the men for grading. The man who is thought to have been Holshay had been employed for a short time and received his money at Oconto with the rest. Among the laborers was one who had about $400 due him, and, after the set tlement, in company with Holshay, he started to walk to Stiles. Shortly afterward the body of the man who had received $400 w a found in the woods under circumstances that pointed almost unmistakably to his companion as his murderer and robber. As a train on the F. & P. M. railroad was going round a bend in Bay City the other day Engineer Linus Keith, who was at the throttle, saw a small child, 18 months of aga, creeping along the track ahead of the locomotive. The train was moving at such a rate of speed that it could not be stopped in time to save the child a life. With wonderful presence of mind the engineer reversed the engine, applied the air-brakes and, jumping through the cab window, ran along the boiler to the steam chest. The engine was then almost upon the bit of humanity, which had by this time crept to the side of the track, but not far enough to clear itself. The engineer, at the risk of his own life, jumped from the engine, caught the child and threw it beyond the reach of the locomotive, and then rolled into the ditch to save himself. The engine came to a stop after passing him about four feet. The child was saved, and the engineer suffered only a bruise of the leg, which has since resulted in lameness.

Paris is following the example of London, and is about to build an underground rail-way line. The railway will be seven miles ong, although only four miles of it will be completely underground; the rest will go through cuttings and by viaducts.

The launching into the air of more than 100,000 pigeons will be an interesting event, about the 1st of August, at the Paris exhi-bition. They are to be let loose on a giving bition. They are to be let loose on a giving signal at the same moment in a garden recently laid out on the site of the Tuileries palace.

Charlotte Harbor, Fla., is said to be so full of fish that it is actually running over. One day recently fully thirty pounds of fish jumped out on shore and were picked up by a citizen. There was one fifteen-pound red-fish, three five-pound snooks and five jackfish.

The Maoris of New Zealand, while at war with the English, invariably sent a notice when they were going to make an attack, as if they were coming on a friendly visit and desired things to be ready for them They thought it very strange that the English did not give them similar notice.

There has been a competition among stenographers to decide how many words can be written on a postal card. Sylvanus Jones, of Richmond, Va., has taken the prize by writing 30,784 words. Mr. Jones is a shorthand writer employed by the Bright Hope Railway company, of Richmond.

The Egyptians have already been recognized for their ability in the manufacture of perfumes, but due credit was never given them before a vase containing some Egyptian cintment was opened at the museum at Alnwick. The perfume it contained still had a puguent odor, although it was more than $,000 years old.

Marcus Boyle, of Marion, O., has a pro-cess by which with a blow-lamp and a car-tain chemical he can blow names into glass in less time than it would take to paint them. He obtained some beautiful effects in prismatic colors, and as it costs about one-half what painting does he expects to supersede all other kinds of lettering on glass.
